Vocabulary in context – Accommodation

1 SPEAKING Check you understand the words in the box. Do you live in one of these types of accommodation?

34

block of (high-rise) flats • bungalow • chalet • cottage • detached house • luxury apartment • semi-detached house • terraced house • villa

2 Complete the text with the correct form of these words.

35

bill • deposit • dorm/dormitory • flat-/house-hunt • flat/house share • flatmate • fully furnished • halls of residence • homestay • host • landlord/landlady • lodger • move in

UK student accommodation options

- 1 Staying at home: The simplest option, but maybe you can't or you want to experience independent living.
- 2 (a): This accommodation type is popular for students in their first year. Usually you'll be on, or near, the campus, living with other students. Americans usually call this type of accommodation (b), based on the idea that you just sleep there.
- 3 (c): This is typical in the second year of university. You and a few friends may need to (d) for a while before you find the perfect place to live together. It's a good idea to find a place that is (e) so that you don't need to buy anything big like a fridge. When you find a place you like, you'll probably have to put down a (f) to reserve it before you actually (g) and start living there. It's essential to speak to the owner of the house, the (h), to check if all your (i), like water and electricity, are included. Also, if something breaks or stops working, who will repair it? Will it be the owner or you? Remember to all help with cleaning the place you rent. Most arguments with (j) start that way!
- 4 Renting a room in someone's house: If you're on your own and can't afford a place of your own, you may want to become a (k), living in someone else's house. It's worth finding out how much contact you'll have with the owner and whether you can share common spaces like the kitchen or living room. If you're studying abroad, a (l) like this can be useful because you can practise speaking the language with your (m) family.

Use it ... don't lose it!

In your opinion, are there more advantages or disadvantages to studying abroad?

What makes you say that?

Studying abroad next year? Time to think about where to live

Three students share their experiences and tips.

A Jenny Harris, 17, Valencia

You're going to study abroad for a year? Get ready for the time of your life! No, I know, in the first week it won't seem like that. You'll be feeling homesick and awkward, and you might even start thinking you've made the biggest mistake of your life moving to a new country where you don't know anyone. But if you choose a homestay, and, if you're like me, after just one week you'll be feeling you've been part of your host family your whole life. When I think back to my year abroad, what I remember most aren't the classes or what I learnt, but how at home I felt in a new culture. When I wanted to know how to get around the city on public transport or how I should reply to certain questions without making a fool of myself, my host mum and her daughter, who became like a sister to me, helped me with everything I needed to know. In fact, I don't think I could have survived without them. There were some ground rules that I didn't particularly appreciate, like helping with the cooking and cleaning, unlike in my own home, or not allowing friends or guests to turn up at any hour. But we only had a few disagreements in all my time there and we formed such a close connection that we're still in touch regularly. So, if you're going abroad, choose a homestay so that you learn the language, but also all about the country's customs and culture. For example, you can find out the best markets to visit, how to avoid the expensive tourist traps, and, on top of that – and importantly in my case – you're saving money because it's always going to be cheaper than renting a flat on your own.

B Nate Parker, 16, Houston

When I found out I was going to be studying abroad for a whole term, I confess to feeling quite nervous about the situation. I was definitely a homebody, so I really wanted to stay with a host family. My study programme didn't have that option, so I found myself in a dorm on campus, much to my initial disappointment. How wrong can you be? I shared my room with a student from Mexico and right from day one we became the best of friends and I started to have the time of my life. I discovered I was more outgoing than I'd realised. And the experience taught me lots of new skills, like doing my own laundry. Sadly, cooking was not a skill I picked up, despite having a shared kitchen! In my defence, there was little need to prepare my own meals, since we had easy access to some great places to eat on campus. The rooms were fully furnished and well equipped, which meant I didn't need to pack much. At first, I thought the facilities would be pretty basic, but ... wrong again. We had all the mod cons, including hi-tech laundry rooms, an on-site gym and even a cinema, all within easy walking distance. Obviously, you could go into the city centre when you liked but the only thing holding you back was that you were so at home on campus that you didn't really feel like it. That did mean making more international than local friends, but that's also a key part of studying abroad in my opinion. You certainly never felt alone, right from day one, since literally everyone was in the same boat. You're discovering a whole new way of life, but together, feeling the same doubts and fears, and the same thrills and excitement, too.

C Will Taylor, 25, Paris

My first experience of living abroad was traumatic. I was in Paris as part of an Erasmus programme. I was young and I signed a very dodgy contract which virtually took away my standard rights as a tenant, leaving me feeling very bitter. Once I'd signed, the landlady informed me that there was a clause stating that I had to teach her three young children English! She threatened to kick me out of the flat if she wasn't satisfied with my lessons, despite never having taught before. She claimed she'd reduced the rent in return – not that I noticed! So, I strongly suggest you check all the small print before signing anything. I also advise you not to put down a deposit on any flat based only on your online impressions. What appears to be a large, airy apartment can end up being a tiny little flat with no space at all. When the ancient sink fell right off my bathroom wall and crashed into pieces, my landlady accused me of breaking it on purpose and, initially at least, refused to repair it. So, if at all possible, go and see the place before handing over any money. I also recommend comparing the price of properties in the same area. Location is, of course, incredibly important. If it takes ages to attend classes or socialise in the evening, think also about the cost and stress involved. Having said that, it was worth it. After a couple of months in my first flat, I learnt by trial and error and found a much better place. Living independently was ideal for me, and my flat was the perfect base for my frequent trips into the heart of an amazing city!

Reporting structures

1a Look at the sentences. Check that you understand the meaning of the reporting verbs.

- a She confessed to feeling nervous.
- b She informed me that there was a special clause.
- c She claimed she'd reduced the rent.
- d He suggested we check the small print.
- e My landlady accused me of breaking it on purpose.
- f I wanted to know whether it was easy to get around the city.
- g She refused to repair it.
- h He advised us not to put down a deposit.
- i He recommended comparing the price of properties.

1b Match the reporting verbs in 1a to the patterns 1–9.

- 1 verb + (that) + sentence in reported speech: add, admit, agree, announce, confess, deny, explain, promise, reply, say
- 2 verb + object + (that) + sentence in reported speech: tell, remind, warn
- 3 verb + question word/if + sentence in reported speech: ask, wonder
- 4 verb + (not) infinitive with to: agree, claim, demand, offer, promise, threaten
- 5 verb + object + (not) infinitive with to: ask, instruct, invite, order, remind, tell, warn
- 6 verb + gerund: admit, deny, regret, suggest
- 7 verb + preposition + gerund: apologise for, insist on, object to
- 8 verb + object + preposition + gerund: blame for, criticise for, congratulate on, warn against
- 9 verb + (that) + object + (should) + infinitive without to: demand, insist, recommend

2 Look at these questions that Becky asked her new landlord. Make reported questions using the words given.

- 1 'How much is the rent?' (asked)
- 2 'Will you fix anything if it stops working?' (wanted)
- 3 'Do we have to pay one month's rent as deposit?' (whether)
- 4 'Can I move in this month?' (wondered)
- 5 'Do you think the neighbours are going to be noisy?' (know)
- 6 'What should we do if we have any problems in this first month?' (landlord)

3a Look at the reporting verbs in bold in these sentences. Find them in 1a or 1b. What do you notice about these verbs?

- 1 She admitted that she had stolen something.
- 2 My friend confessed that he had told Sara our secret.
- 3 I suggested that we should turn the electricity off.
- 4 They recommended getting the bus.
- 5 He promised to get to the house on time.
- 6 They denied that they had broken the window.
- 7 She agreed to pay an extra month's deposit.

3b Rewrite the sentences in 3a, using the same reporting verb in bold and the alternative structure.

4 Complete the text. Write one word in each gap.

Eccentric Britain!

When, in 1986, Bill Heine asked his sculptor friend John Buckley

(a) make his house look special, John had no problem at all agreeing to (b) just that. He created a statue of a shark crashing right through the roof of the house. Straight away, some people hated the sculpture and criticised them (c) ruining the neighbourhood. Others even accused them (d) creating a public monstrosity. Others, meanwhile, congratulated them (e) brightening up the place. Some of the unhappy neighbours insisted (f) making an official complaint about the shark. Unusually, perhaps, a top politician of the time confessed (g) liking the shark and recommended that they (h) allow it to stay. Not only is it still there today, but the local council who once threatened (i) take it down have now suggested (j) it a protected piece of artwork and have warned the owners of the house (k) to take it down! Many people admit (l) all the way to the street on the outskirts of Oxford just to take a photo of it.

Let's (1) it. We all like listening to music at home, right? And we all have our favourite artists and songs. But have you ever wondered (2) would happen if you played your favourite song again and again, at full volume? One woman in the UK found out. She went to jail for playing Ed Sheeran's song Shape of you on repeat at full blast for half an hour. This wasn't the first time the woman had annoyed her neighbour with loud music and her landlords had demanded (3) stop causing a disturbance from her semi-detached house near Birmingham. Her next-door neighbour (4) she could no longer cope with the noise. The judge homed in (5) the fact that the noisy neighbour had already been in trouble with the law before (6) account of the same offence and gave her a two-month prison sentence. It's true that Ed Sheeran might not be everyone's cup of tea, but not everyone is mad about opera either. So, what happens when you play an aria from Verdi's La Traviata every day at full volume? When singers perform the aria in concert halls, they often bring the (7) down. But in this case, the song drove a whole street crazy! GREAT THINKERS

Chalk Talk

- 4 SPEAKING  Follow the instructions.
 - 1 When people think about building or adapting homes today, they often think about how their home can be as eco-friendly as possible. Individually, think about how you could build an eco-friendly home or make a pre-existing home greener.
 - 2 When you have some ideas, write them on the board or a large sheet of paper.
 - 3 Look at what other people have written. Do they have similar or different ideas to you? What do you think of their ideas? Why?
 - 4 Work in small groups. Discuss your ideas. Would you like someone to clarify or justify anything? Which do you think are the best ideas? Why?

5 Read this text. Does it mention any of your ideas in 4?

So you want to make your home eco-friendly?

First things first, what exactly is an eco-friendly home?

An eco-friendly home is one that tries to lessen its impact on the environment, principally through the way the home is designed and/or built.

Are eco-friendly homes expensive?

Not necessarily. There are lots of simple but significant modifications that you can make to your home that can make your house or flat more environmentally-friendly.

For example?

Find a way to collect rainwater and greywater (in other words, wastewater from sinks, baths or washing machines) so that you can use that water again, for example to use in the toilet or to water plants. And when it comes to changing the lighting in your home, consider LED lighting, which can reduce the amount of electricity consumed.

What materials should an eco-friendly home use?

Glass is good! The more glass windows you have, the less artificial light and heating you need, thanks to the natural sunlight. It goes without saying that the orientation of the house is important. Make sure there are more windows on the side of the house facing the sun, and fewer on the other (helping you to avoid heat loss, of course). Meanwhile, do what you can to use natural, sustainably sourced or recycled materials. To lower the carbon footprint of the house, don't use plastic unless absolutely necessary. As a simple rule, it's always a good sign if you know exactly where all the materials used to build your house actually come from.

Any suggestions for how to heat an eco-friendly home?

In general, the ideal energy source is solar power. But don't forget that good insulation can be just as important as your heating source. Grass roofs provide a natural solution for keeping a house warmer in the winter and cooler in the summer. Apart from that, try to make your house as airtight as possible. That will mean that cold can't come in and heat can't escape, ultimately reducing how much energy the house consumes ... and how much you spend on bills!

SEL

Think about how you could minimise the environmental impact of your home and/or your school. Think about the ideas in the text in 5, but also simple steps like wearing warmer clothes and turning the heating down at home in the winter. Look for more information and ideas if necessary and try to come up with some creative solutions.

GREAT LEARNERS

Great learners make connections between what they learn and the world outside.

How relevant do you think the information about eco-friendly homes is in today's world? Why?

Useful expressions to respond and refer to what your partner said

- As you/X said, ...
- You/X just mentioned ...
- I'd like to take up what you/X mentioned a minute ago.
- When you say ...,
- I agree with you when you say ..., (but) ...
- Let me pick up on what you/X said.
- It's true that ... (but) ...
- What's also true is that ...
- You/X seemed to suggest that ...

3b SPEAKING Why is it important to use the expressions in the Speaking bank when answering discussion questions with a partner? Discuss and then read the Exam tip to check your ideas.

Exam tip

In tasks where you discuss something with others, remember that it's important to listen to your partner(s) and respond and refer to what they say. This can be difficult when you're nervous and are concentrating on what you're going to say next, but try to react to what your partner says. And remember, there are no right or wrong answers.

4 Look at the questions in 1 again and think about how you are going to answer each question. Remember that you will need a couple of ideas or examples to support each answer.

5 SPEAKING Take it in turns to ask and answer the questions in 1. After your partner has spoken for a short while, respond and refer to what they have said. Use expressions from the Speaking bank.

6 Write three more questions about homes, families and neighbours, similar to the questions in 1.

Practice makes perfect

7 SPEAKING Ask and answer your questions in 6. After your partner has spoken for a short while, respond and refer to what they have said.

An article – describing a place

1 SPEAKING  Discuss these questions.

- 1 Look at the cities in the photos. Which would you prefer to live in? Why?
- 2 Which factors do you think decide the quality of life in a city? Are the factors the same for adults and teenagers? Why/Why not?

San Francisco

Munich

2 Read this short article and answer the questions.

- 1 Do you agree with the factors mentioned in the article?
- 2 In your opinion, are there any factors missing from the article?
- 3 Would the town or city you live in, or that's nearest to you, score well on the factors that the article mentions, for adults or for teens?

Choosing the best city to live in Several tables appear each year ranking cities according to the quality of life of the inhabitants. The criteria usually include things like the political, social and economic environment, health and sanitation, public services, transport, housing, crime levels and the natural environment. I think we'd all agree that those are important factors. But let's imagine we're trying to find the best cities for teenagers to live in. Surely there are other important factors involved, too? A few years ago, a financial advice group called smartasset created a list of the best US cities for teenagers to live in. Factors they took into account included what they described as 'fun stuff', things like the number of basketball hoops, skate parks, beaches, bowling alleys, cinemas and arcades per 100,000 residents. Because most teens don't drive or have a car, they also looked at how easy it was to get to places just by walking. They went further and looked at how many teens there were in each city, how many high-school students graduated each year and how easy it was for teens to get a job. In the top 20 US cities for teens were well-known places such as Seattle, San Francisco and San Diego.

3 Read the task. What are the key words?

You read the following announcement in an English-language magazine:

We're looking for articles suggesting the world's best city or town for teens to live in. It could be your home town or city, a town or city from your region or country, or any town or city that you know quite well. Describe the place and explain why you think it's ideal for teens.

4 Read this article written by a student and answer the questions.

- 1 Does the article cover all the points in the task in 3?
- 2 Does it make the city sound attractive to teens, and to you, personally? Why/Why not?

San Diego, California

The official teen paradise!

Just think! If I say 'California' to you, what comes to mind? Beaches, sun and fun, right? That's exactly what San Diego has to offer, making it a paradise for people of all ages, but especially teens.

Vocabulary – Describing cities and towns

5 SPEAKING  Look at these words and expressions and answer the questions.

atmospheric • bohemian • bustling • cosmopolitan • crowded • fun • hilly • hip • historic • imposing • industrial • isolated • laid-back • picturesque • renowned for • run-down • shabby • spotless • sprawling • steeped in (history/art/culture) • stylish • thriving • touristy • tranquil • trendy • upmarket • vibrant • welcoming • well-connected

- 1 Which of the words were used to describe San Diego in the article in 2?
- 2 Which of the words could you use to describe your home town or city?

If you didn't already know, San Diego is California's second biggest city, situated on the Pacific coast, right next to the Mexican border and the city of Tijuana. Thanks to its location, San Diego is steeped in Mexican and Hispanic culture and still has a very cosmopolitan feel today, thanks partly also to the fact that it's so well-connected by road, sea and air.

Before you start getting the idea that San Diego is just an old historic town, I'd like to point out that the city has over 30 public beaches – more than any other city in the US. If you're into surfing, there's really no better place to be, with perfect beaches and ideal weather nearly all year round. Or why not walk along The Promenade? It's always bustling, making it an atmospheric place for teens to get together and spend endless hours skating, eating out or shopping. And if wildlife is more your scene, you've got the SeaWorld theme park nearby, too. And finally, let's not forget that San Diego is renowned for its amazing zoo, located in the unmissable Balboa Park.

Quite frankly, San Diego is like a dream come true for teenagers. But don't just take my word for it. Come and see the city for yourself. You're bound to end up wanting to stay!

Exam tip

When you write an article, to make your writing interesting and appealing to the reader, go beyond using basic vocabulary and use more precise and complex words and expressions. By using varied vocabulary, you can also avoid repeating words.

- 6 Look at the Writing bank. Which of the ideas and expressions are used in the article in 4?

Writing bank

Ways to involve the reader

- Think of a title that grabs the reader's attention.
- Use you and your or we and our.
- Use expressions such as:
If you're into ...,
If ... is what you're looking for,
For those seeking ...,
If ... is more your scene,
Imagine ...
Just think ...
- Use direct questions.
- Use adverbs to make your opinion clear (see the Writing bank on page 41).

- 7a Look again at the article in 4. How many paragraphs are there? What is the aim of each paragraph?
- 7b You are going to do the task in 3. Choose the town or city that you would like to write about and make notes. Then make a plan by organising your notes into paragraphs.

Practice makes perfect

- 8a Write your article for the task in 3. Use vocabulary from 5 and ideas and expressions from the Writing bank.
- 8b When you finish writing your article, use the Writing checklist on page 141 to check it.
- 8c Read other students' articles and vote for the best city for teens.

Reported statements

- When the reporting verb (e.g. say, tell) is in the past, the tense of the verb in reported speech usually changes, going one tense 'back'.
- could, would, should and might do not change from direct to reported speech.
- Pronouns and possessive adjectives change.
'I need your laptop.' said Brad. → Brad said he needed her laptop.
- Other words also change, e.g. here and now change to there and then.

Reported questions

- The same changes occur with tenses, pronouns and other words as with reported statements.
- We do not use the auxiliary verb do in reported questions.
'Do you like rap music?' she asked. → She asked me if I liked rap music.
- There is no inversion of subject and verb in reported questions.
'Where are you?' he asked. → He asked me where I was.
- Reported questions are not actual questions, so they do not need question marks.
- When there is no question word, we use if or whether.
'Can you do it?' they asked. → They asked me if I could do it.

Reporting structures and reporting verbs

Note that some verbs go in more than one category.

- verb + (that) + sentence in reported speech: add, admit, agree, announce, claim, confess, deny, explain, promise, reply, say
- verb + object + (that) + sentence in reported speech: inform, tell, remind, warn
- verb + question word/if/whether + sentence in reported speech: ask, want to know, wonder
- verb + infinitive with to: agree, claim, demand, offer, promise, refuse, threaten
- verb + object + infinitive with to: advise, ask, instruct, invite, order, remind, tell, warn
- verb + gerund: admit, deny, recommend, regret, suggest
- verb + preposition + gerund: apologise for, confess to, insist on, object to
- verb + object + preposition + gerund: accuse of, blame for, criticise for, congratulate on, warn against
- verb + (that) + object + (should) + infinitive without to: demand, insist, recommend, suggest

Reply questions

B: Have they?
- A: Katy and Leah will study abroad next year.*
B: Will they?
- A: She isn't living at home.*
B: Isn't she?
- A: I wouldn't like to live in New York.*
B: Wouldn't you?
- A: Nothing has changed.*
B: Hasn't it?

- In reply questions, we use pronouns, not names or nouns.
- We make reply questions with auxiliary or modal verbs, not main verbs. If there is no auxiliary or modal verb in the statement we reply to, we use the appropriate part of the auxiliary do.
- We reply to affirmative statements with affirmative reply questions. We reply to negative statements with negative reply questions.
- When we respond to everybody, nobody and somebody, we use the pronoun they.

Use

- We use reply questions to show interest in what somebody tells us.
- The intonation in reply questions usually rises, emphasising your interest.

The perfect teenage punishment

As we know, teenagers can find parents embarrassing, but the Internet has given mums and dads a whole new way of making life awkward for their children. Thirteen-year-old Andrew was in trouble with his parents for constantly staying out past the time they required him to be home.

(1) They gave Andrew a choice. He could either be banned from gaming for a month or he could allow his parents to take over his social media account for the same month. (2) However, he was in for a shock because his mum and dad started posting lots of photos with funny and clever captions. They took hilarious shots of Andrew's little brother and sister in strange outfits and crazy costumes. (3) It was all in vain because his parents said they were having far too much fun and that they had loads more ideas they wanted to try out. For Andrew's parents, this was a new and enjoyable experience! (4) So much so that Andrew's account became really popular, with his classmates checking it out regularly. They thought it was really funny and different. Andrew disagreed!

At the end of the month, Andrew was asked about how effective the punishment was. He said he never wanted to go through the experience again and he was learning to make good choices. (5) But, on a more serious note, Andrew has now started writing a blog about his experience, and he suggests that parents of teenagers will find punishments are more effective if they break with tradition and use tactics that are closer to the world of today's teens. He says, 'Teenagers will always push the boundaries and parents will want to instil some form of discipline, but this will work better if it is part of how we live our lives.'

(6) We need to move with the times rather than necessarily relying on what has gone before. Maybe when this generation are adults and working in the law they will bring about their own changes.

Reading exam tip

In activities in which you match missing paragraphs to gaps in the text, remember ... Check every missing paragraph in each gap even if you have already selected it.

- A After only one day Andrew found the process too humiliating. He asked his parents if he could change the punishment and give up gaming for a month.
- B He is also grateful his parents increased the popularity of his account, although he has had many requests to bring his parents back! And he has learnt that people prefer fun posts that make them laugh rather than the selfies he had posted previously.
- C Andrew had to put up with his mum and dad managing the account for a month. They quickly became very good at it, posting videos of people dancing as well as staged photos.
- D He was unaware of what a significant impact the punishment would have. This was partly because he underestimated his parents' commitment to the cause.
- E Eventually, his parents got so fed up with him ignoring the rules they decided to punish him. But they came up with something much more creative than the old-fashioned grounding that most teenagers are familiar with.
- F This discussion is also raising more questions about punishments generally. Nowadays, a psychological approach might be better than, for example, physically keeping someone at home.
- G Andrew could not bear the thought of being banned from gaming. So he chose to let his parents take over his social media account, as he thought they would write some boring posts and that would be the end of it.

Unusual and eccentric behaviour in your country

1 SPEAKING Starting point

What do you remember about the news story from the US that you read on page 58? Why did people pay parking fines with peanut butter and jam? What was unusual about the British house described on page 72?

2 SPEAKING Project task

You want to inform students from other countries about unusual celebrations and events and intriguing behaviour, customs and traditions which are exclusive to your country or region. Use your own knowledge and the Internet to find a selection of interesting examples from your own country or region. Prepare one of these:

- A poster
- B presentation
- C video message
- D information leaflet

Research areas

- unusual stories that have just appeared in the news
- behaviour, customs and traditions in your country or region that people from other places may find unusual or intriguing
- celebrations and events that are typical in your region or country that don't generally happen in other places
- clothes or costumes that people wear that are in some way out of the ordinary

3 Think about ...

Digital skills

Don't limit your online research to information only. Look also for useful, striking or funny photos or graphics that you can use to illustrate the information in your project to make it more interesting and to make it clearer for somebody from another country.

Academic skills

When working on an assignment, it's important to manage your time carefully. Find out when you have to finish the project and how much time you have. Then decide how long each different stage (e.g. research, writing, checking) will take. Make sure everybody in the team knows when they have to finish their part.

Collaboration

When you work in a team, it's essential to listen to everyone and let everybody contribute. Sometimes one or two people can dominate in a group, but the best teams have a balance between everybody, even the quieter members of the team. Encourage all team members to have their say.

Useful language

That's a good idea. But what do you think, (Sara)?, Let's listen to (Oscar), Who hasn't spoken?, It's (Olga's) turn to speak.

Intercultural awareness

Think about what may seem unusual to people from other countries and regions about the things from your country and region you describe and why that might be. Is there any background information or any other concepts you could mention to explain the customs, traditions or behaviour? Check also for any words or expressions that you think are difficult to translate and decide how to get the meaning across effectively.

4 SPEAKING Project time

Do the project. Then present it to the class.

5 Evaluation

Give each project a mark from 1 to 5 (5 = very good) for:

IS VANLIFE FOR YOU?

In the past few years, converting a van and using it to live and travel in has become increasingly popular worldwide. For some people, vanlife is a permanent choice and 'Home is where you park it'. For others, it's a part-time holiday option. To find out more, we talked to three people with different views on the subject.

A: MARIE O'CONNOR, 42

I've been living in my van for about ten years now, and for me it's a way of life. My van's quite old: I bought it from my uncle and I did the conversion myself, but I didn't want to spend a lot of money, so I pretty much only used reclaimed materials I had lying around at home or was given. I only spent a couple of hundred pounds on doing it up. Inside, well, it's not exactly luxurious, but it's fine for me. I didn't decide to live in a van in order to have the same home that I used to when I lived in a flat! I have a simple bed, and I keep my things in boxes underneath.

I find the name 'vanlife' a bit ridiculous – it just sounds like some sort of marketing gimmick to me. I decided to live in a van because I was fed up with my previous life: you know, like in that question 'Do you live to work or work to live?'. Before, my life was all about work and earning money and having stuff, but I wasn't happy. So I decided to take control of things. Now I don't have a boss and I'm free to do what I want. I live very cheaply, but if I need money, I go somewhere and work for a few weeks. I know when farmers will need extra workers and I have a few regular places I head to each year. A friend once asked me if I missed my old life. That's easy – not a bit!

B: HANNAH SEMPLE, 33

My husband, Mark, and I are both lawyers. We have high-powered jobs in the City which mean we earn well and can afford a luxury apartment overlooking the Thames. But a few years ago, Mark had a serious illness and I think that made us re-think our work-life balance. He's better now, but we're trying to make sure we enjoy life, as well as work. After reading an article about vanlife, we decided to buy a fully-furnished motor home. We probably spent another £5,000 on new kitchen equipment and having running water, a power shower and a new fridge installed. We use the van at weekends and for holidays. Last year we both took two months off work to do a longer trip in Tuscany. It was wonderful to sit and enjoy the views in the evening, after a lovely meal, knowing that our bed was just a few metres away. Our friends joke that we've joined the hippies, but for us it's been a great way to slow things down and make sure we get the benefits of all our hard work.

C: MAX STENDHAL, 24

My girlfriend, Poppy, was always reading blogs about vanlife, so once I'd finished uni, I promised we would have a go. We did the van conversion ourselves and it took nearly a year because we were both working at the time. We watched a lot of videos online and got advice from friends who had their own vans. We put a lot of work into the design, but we're very pleased with how it's turned out – it's simple, but I think we've made good use of the space. Our initial plan was to use the van as a cheap way to take a few years out and see the world. Neither of us wanted to get stuck in a nine-to-five job. We both love the freedom the van gives us to travel or move on when we want, and we've met some great people. We both love surfing and snowboarding, so it's also been a good way to move about and do sport. But it's much more than just a way to get around. We started posting on Instagram® while we were doing the conversion and our account soon became really popular, with lots of followers. Once we started travelling, we started our YouTube™ channel and now we have thousands of subscribers. I never thought I'd end up being a YouTuber, but it means we can afford to continue living our life on the road.

Reporting structures

1 ☆ Choose the correct reporting verbs to report the statements.

- 'Turn off the electricity before you leave, please.' instruct/claim
- 'I'm afraid it was me who left the door unlocked last night.' admit/advise
- 'You broke the TV. It was fine when you moved into my flat.' recommend/blame
- 'Remember we need to pay the electricity bill this week.' remind/demand
- 'You can complain as much as you like, but you have to pay for the damage.' refuse/insist
- 'I'll look for another flat unless you start doing your share of the housework.' threaten/suggest
- 'I'm sorry about all the noise we made last night.' confess/apologise
- 'I wish I hadn't told the landlord about the party.' regret/accuse
- 'Do you think bills are included in the rent?' warn/wonder

✓ Great students' tip

Speaking: Using reply questions

Reply questions are a good way to show interest in what someone else is saying during a conversation. As well as improving your spoken interaction, they can also be used to convey a range of emotions such as surprise, happiness and sarcasm, depending on the intonation. Using them correctly can help your English to sound more sophisticated.

☆☆ Write reply questions to respond to these statements.

- You can't park your car in this space.
- I really like that new series on Netflix.
- Jamie's got another new phone.
- We're in this classroom until 10.30.
- Mr Carr's on sick leave this week.

☆☆☆ Complete the conversation with reply questions.

Joe: (1)? I suppose that's not a big surprise.

Mel: Apparently there are 78 bathrooms.

Joe: (2)? That's ridiculous! Does it say how much it's worth?

Mel: Let's see ... Yes, they say if it went on sale, it would sell for just under three billion dollars.

Joe: (3)? Maybe we should go and visit it when we're in London.

Mel: (4)? I can't say I'm all that interested.

Joe: (5)? You've talked about nothing else for the last five minutes!

A place you simply have to visit: Porto

Are you looking for a great place in Europe for a short holiday? Do you want to see the sights but also do your own thing? If so, Porto may be the place for you!

Located in the north of the country, Portugal's second city lies at the mouth of the Douro, and wherever you go in the city, it certainly feels like you're never very far from the river. With a population just over 200,000, Porto offers all the attractions of a city, but still manages to feel a very manageable size for visitors.

If, like me, you're into modern art, then Porto has plenty to offer.

I recommend you visit the Portuguese Centre of Photography, located in a converted prison. I also loved the laid-back Massarelos district, with its fantastic botanical gardens and hip cafés and shops along trendy Rua Miguel Bombarda. But if you head off the main streets and just wander through some of the more tranquil parts of this hilly city, you're going to see some amazing street art. And if you're a Harry Potter fan, then you must visit the Livraria Lello bookshop, which inspired some of the interiors in the novels. And for those seeking a day away from the sights, you can always take a bus round to the beach at Foz do Douro to walk along the seafront or have a relaxing swim.

Although some say Porto has got quite touristy in recent years, it's still easy to get away from the crowds and lose yourself in its atmospheric streets. It's a fantastic place for visitors, with lots to do and see, and all in all, Porto is a destination I can whole-heartedly recommend!

Address the reader directly.

Finish with a recommendation.

Vocabulary – Describing cities and towns

1 ☆ Complete the conversation with the adjectives in the box.

crowded • hip • historic • run-down • shabby • steeped • touristy

- A: How was your trip?
 B: Dreadful! The guidebook said the city centre was 'welcoming', but it was really (1) with loads of tour groups, gift shops and expensive restaurants. They said it was 'bustling', but that meant it was so (2) and packed full of people that you could hardly move.
 A: What about the (3) old town? Isn't that meant to be very (4) nowadays, with lots of cool galleries and cafés?
 B: Well, the guidebook described the old town as 'bohemian' and (5) '..... in history', but in reality it was very (6) and uncared-for, with lots of (7) old buildings.
 A: What a disappointment.

2 ☆☆ Match the words in the box to the definitions.

atmospheric • hilly • imposing • laid-back • picturesque • spotless • sprawling • thriving

- covering a wide area in a way that is ugly or not planned
- large and impressive
- attractive, especially because it is old and interesting
- creating a special mood or feeling
- with lots of steep streets
- with a calm and relaxed atmosphere
- extremely clean
- very successful

3 ☆☆ Read the article. Tick (✓) the things the writer likes about Porto.

3 Find and correct seven mistakes in the text.

I saw Beppe at football practice and he told that he hadn't heard from Marcia since the night of the party. I know she's still really upset and I told Beppe he must have talked to her. He claims to go to her house last Wednesday, but I don't believe him. If he went, I'm sure they could have sorted things out and she was feeling better now. But unless he doesn't contact her soon, she's going to get fed up waiting. The trouble is that Beppe is used to get his own way and I know he finds it really difficult to admit he was wrong.
